Instructor: Ardavan Mobasheri

Given the increasing importance of the financial system to the global economy, and the historic impacts of the former on the later especially as it relates to “financial bubbles”, the course will aim to provide an in-depth review of the evolution of financial markets, the financial system, financial bubbles, and financial regulation, and their impacts on the economic evolution of the U.S. in particular and other countries time permitting. The goal is to provide students with a greater appreciation for the realities of economic cycles and the fragility of financial markets. Students should direct questions about the course and its content to Prof. Mobasheri (amobashe@richmond.edu).

Note: This course will fulfill the requirement for a 200-level economics course for any major with such a requirement, including Econ majors in both Arts & Sciences and the Robins School of Business.
